

What is "Leaking National Secrets"?

By Ah Rong, a Dafa practitioner in China

(Clearwisdom.net) When people talk about national secrets, they normally think of military facilities, equipment and deployment or important security documents. When these are sold or leaked to another country, it is called "leaking national secrets."

However it's impossible to imagine how people practicing Qigong, removing their illnesses, cultivating themselves according to "Truth, Compassion, Forbearance," becoming good people and telling the truth can be considered crimes. The leader of such a large country uses inhuman torture to send Falun Gong practitioners to forced labor camps and jail, and has them beaten and arrested. He sends people persistent in their belief into mental hospitals to be tortured. More than 360 are confirmed to have been beaten to death, while the Chinese government's internal sources place the number closer to 1,600. Even an 8-month-old infant was not spared. People's basic human rights have been severely violated. These facts were not allowed to be told, however. When Dafa practitioners tell it, they are charged with "leaking national secrets" and receive heavy jail sentences. What happened to law and morality in China?

I know three older women, around the ages of 60 to 70. One of them is an associate professor at a university, while the other two are retired workers of a scientific research institute. These three older women worked hard all their lives for their job and for daily living, and they used to be afflicted with many illnesses. After practicing Falun Dafa, they became completely healthy. And yet, only because they wouldn't give up cultivation of Falun Dafa, police officers went to their homes to harass them daily and put them into a brainwashing class. They were threatened with forced labor if they still would not give up cultivation. The older women were forced to leave home and roam about for more than a year. They lost their retirement benefits a long time ago. Under such difficult circumstances, these kind-natured ladies still clarified truth to people with their own experiences and exposed the evil. With lots of facts to back them up, they exposed that China's ruling dictator and the puppets of his government use all available media tools to slander and frame Falun Gong. The police authorities are frantically trying to capture them and level the charge "leaking national secrets" against them.

A friend of mine who works in a police department once told me in private that right now the government has issued an order that anyone who is arrested with Falun Gong truth-clarifying materials on them will be sentenced to jail under the charge "leaking national secret." Many such people are in jail.

China's ruling dictator persecutes Falun Gong and kills the innocent. Whoever cultivates "Truth, Compassion, Forbearance" can be "beaten to death, not be held accountable and it will be counted as suicide." This is the despot's "national secret." When the truth is told, it is labeled "leaking national secrets".

It's good to see that more and more people are learning about this "national secret" and more and more people are "leaking national secrets." People are waking up, and it won't be too long before the real criminal, China's ruling dictator, the biggest human rights villain is judged!
